Once samples are collected, lab results are determined in colony forming units (cfu)/100ml. This unit describes how many colonies of E. coli bacteria are able to be grown in the laboratory from an initial sample of 100mL of water. Each colony comes from a single parent bacterium, so the value for cfu/100ml is thought to reflect the number of bacteria that were present in the original sample.